Please support our Black women and breast cancer campaign by purchasing a book. We are trying to reach every Black woman in America with our message "Black women must get a mammogram for the rest of their lives to protect their children." These books were written to help you transform your life. To change the way, you think and to help you and your children escape poverty and misery. You are not just what you eat you are what you think. The reason why you are failing at life is that you do not have enough information to conduct your life. You are trying to use the knowledge you learned 10, 15, 20 and thirty years ago to solve today's problems and that information is not enough thus your children suffer because of your outdated decisions. These books are for men and women and the young boy who thinks it is smart to put a gun in his hands. Our first question to you is do you sleep well at night. Of course you do. You have a roof, a bed and running water by contrast thousands of Black children do not these things because their mothers died this year. Help us get the word out that triple negative cancer is killing Black women. Black women need to get a mammogram, every year for the rest of their lives. How did you feel when your mother died amplified that emotion 10 times that is how a child feels when they are told they will never see their mother again. A mother's death is something that will knock you to your knees. A little girl in foster care said this at the death of her mother, "I did have a mother, but now she is gone." Another child told his mother was gone, asked why he could not go with her. Why he couldn't go to heaven and live with her.

The Princess of Yelang Part 1	$5.00	"A young woman I mentored called me two weeks ago to tell me she had breast cancer. I had not spoken to her in 8 years. I spent a year training her in the principle of how to manage people and how to think and problem solve at her job. She called as I was writing a letter to a pastor in Atlanta, Georgia asking him to join our breast campaign. Her call reinforced my determination to see this project through. She was returning from a trip to Canada to get some herbs to treat her breast cancer. This woman has a master's degree, yet she reached out to herbs to cure her breast cancer. She was upset she did not like the treatment suggested by her doctors in Ohio. I told her to stop taking the herbs. If herbs could cure cancer those herbs would be grown under lock and key and the holders of those herbs would be billionaires if the herbs were a cure for breast cancer. We discussed the possibility of having her breast removed. I told her I would find the doctor who performed my surgery and for her to come to Michigan to get her operation at Henry Ford Hospital and to get radiation and chemotherapy. Henry Ford hospital have some great female surgeons and Henry Ford pays their surgeons well. Black women diagnosed with breast cancer, reach out for alternate cures because they lack information and confidence in their doctors, and they do not know what decisions to make regarding their diagnosis." How many times do you read in a week? How many books have you read this year? Do you know that the solution to your problems is written in a certain book somewhere? Reading books is not only for entertainment or educative purposes, but it is also a good way to gather social wisdom on tackling life issues. Scholars say that gold hidden in books may take longer to be discovered than gold is hidden deep on the earth's surface. The phrase explains the reluctance of many people to read books. However, it is important to know that the richest and most successful people in the world today are readers who not only spend hours reading every week but also encourage people to read. There is a lot of treasure hidden in books, and only a handful of people have managed to read and tap this treasure; this explains the few successful people in society.

You can start with several books to develop a reading habit and gain knowledge and inspiration. The books listed are inspirational books that can help you grow both spiritually and emotionally. In the book, the author talks about the importance of consistency and believing in ourselves; indeed, the solution to our problems may lie deep within us. As you go through the daily hustle and tussles, it is important to understand that there are many enemies within. The author talks about understanding the enemy. Books enlighten us and are always an indirect heart-to-heart communication between an author and a reader on a particular subject. You should set a goal of reading at least one book every month, and the assurance is that within six months, you will be more knowledgeable than ever, and your life will change for the better.

Dear Area Beauticians:

My name is Minister Lee. I am the host of The Women of Courage Show WHPR 88.1FM. I am writing to invite you to a Monday brunch to discuss our Black Women and Breast Cancer Campaign. We need your help. We are trying to reach a million Black women in Michigan and beyond with the message Black women must get an annual mammogram regardless of their age for the rest of their lives to save their children. During our research we learned that an inordinate number of Black women are dying of breast cancer because Black women are one of the largest female populations in this country to ignore their health. Black women work long hard hours at low paying jobs just to provide housing for their children. They become tired, frustrated and depressed experiencing an Allostatic load thereby ignoring their health. Since there are two places a person can count on finding Black women either in church or at the beautician is why we are enlisting your help. We want you to do two things share a flyer with your customers and give them information where to find the free book Black Women and Breast Cancer.

We realize your time is precious because most of you work long hours to earn a living so my asking you to give up part of your day off is asking a lot. Nevertheless, I ask this of you because I want you to help me to save a life. That life can be one of your sisters, daughter, mother, grandmother, niece, aunt, cousins or best friends. Death is no joke. No woman can help her children from the grave. Let that sink in. Breast cancer is no respecter of person like the commercial says Shingles Doesn't Care. The average Black woman have at least two children so when she dies those children are left defenseless. Their natural protector is in the grave. We must stop this tragedy. Why, because many people have no idea how many black children are being abused, raped and murdered all over this country while in foster care. Or turned into prostitutes by pimps lurking around foster care homes. Didn't you read the article where a trucker rescued over a hundred young girls. So, join me for this luncheon so we can stop Black women from dying of breast cancer. Please contact our volunteer, Kenya Jay, at 313 957 8413, or our spokesperson Michelle Abd 'Elazia at 248-219-9879 for dates time and location.
